Residents stand strong against hatred

About 100 people gathered at Niagara-on-the-Lake's rainbow crosswalk Friday morning to stand in solidarity against the repeated displays of hate at the site.

When they arrived at the corner of Anderson Lane and Mississauga Street, however, they were greeted by yet another act of vandalism to the important symbol of inclusivity. And this fourth time, the hate messages painted on the crosswalk earlier that day were broader and more direct, including death threats and a reference to the Black community via the "BLM" abbreviation.

Old Town resident Suzin Schiff-Malins mobilized to organize the rally Thursday, after the third incident of vandalism occurred early Sunday morning. That incident followed two prior ones that occurred just days after the installation of the crosswalk in late May.

Town staff mobilized quickly to clean up that damage, and the crosswalk was returned to its original state on Tuesday afternoon.

But Schiff-Malins felt she couldn't just stand by and do nothing. She contacted friends and connections via emails, phone calls and text messages two days later.

"This affects me viscerally," Schiff-Malins told The Local. "It affects my heart, and it affects my humanity. Watching it continually happen, and just waiting for someone to clean it up, to me that's almost participating in the acceptance of the inevitability of such an act, and I don't want to accept that."

Schiff-Malins and others were impressed with the turnout for the gathering, which was supported by the Town of Niagara-on-the-Lake.

"Suzin reached out," said Marah Minor, the town's community engagement and communications coordinator. "She expressed that she and the others wanted to show their support and stand strong together. So we arranged this on quick notice, posted about it on our social media, and we've had a very good turnout."

The gathering included people of all ages and backgrounds. Many members of the 2SLGBTQAI+ community were there as well as their family members and friends.

George Webber strolled over from his home in the neighbourhood to show his support. "I am blown away by the turnout," said Webber. "This is just from circulating an email. This just shows that there's way more good here than there is bad."

Webber was shocked at the latest defacing of the crosswalk, and that it included a reference to the Black community.

When the crosswalk at Anderson Lane and Mississauga Street was first vandalized in early June, just days after its installation, De Divitis told The Local that he wasn't at all surprised by the act. On the contrary, he and other members of the 2SLGBTQAI+ community had warned repeatedly that the crosswalk would attract this kind of vandalism.

"In my mind it definitely was a hate crime from the start," says De Divitis. "If you're not a part of a marginalized community, you don't see the things that we do. I've seen the body language, heard the comments throughout my life. Others think that kind of stuff doesn't happen here in Niagara. Well, it does."

When the crosswalk at Anderson Lane and Mississauga Street was first vandalized in early June, just days after its installation, De Divitis told The Local that he wasn't at all surprised by the act. On the contrary, he and other members of the 2SLGBTQAI+ community had warned repeatedly that the crosswalk would attract this kind of vandalism.

"In my mind it definitely was a hate crime from the start," says De Divitis. "If you're not a part of a marginalized community, you don't see the things that we do. I've seen the body language, heard the comments throughout my life. Others think that kind of stuff doesn't happen here in Niagara. Well, it does."

Pride Niagara Chair Enzo De Divitis is pleased that the Niagara Regional Police Services are treating the latest vandalism to Niagara-on-the-Lake's rainbow crosswalk as a hate crime.

But to De Divitis, it shouldn't have taken four incidents for that to happen.

"In my mind it definitely was a hate crime from the start," says De Divitis. "If you're not a part of a marginalized community, you don't see the things that we do. I've seen the body language, heard the comments throughout my life. Others think that kind of stuff doesn't happen here in Niagara. Well, it does."

When the crosswalk at Anderson Lane and Mississauga Street was first vandalized in early June, just days after its installation, De Divitis told The Local that he wasn't at all surprised by the act. On the contrary, he and other members of the 2SLGBTQAI+ community had warned repeatedly that the crosswalk would attract this kind of vandalism.

"In my mind it definitely was a hate crime from the start," says De Divitis. "If you're not a part of a marginalized community, you don't see the things that we do. I've seen the body language, heard the comments throughout my life. Others think that kind of stuff doesn't happen here in Niagara. Well, it does."

Continued on page 2

Pride Niagara warns hate crimes likely to escalate

Mike Balsom  The Local

Pride Niagara Chair Enzo De Divitis is pleased that the Niagara Regional Police Services are treating the latest vandalism to Niagara-on-the-Lake's rainbow crosswalk as a hate crime.

But to De Divitis, it shouldn't have taken four incidents for that to happen.

"In my mind it definitely was a hate crime from the start," says De Divitis. "If you're not a part of a marginalized community, you don't see the things that we do. I've seen the body language, heard the comments throughout my life. Others think that kind of stuff doesn't happen here in Niagara. Well, it does."

When the crosswalk at Anderson Lane and Mississauga Street was first vandalized in early June, just days after its installation, De Divitis told The Local that he wasn't at all surprised by the act. On the contrary, he and other members of the 2SLGBTQAI+ community had warned repeatedly that the crosswalk would attract this kind of vandalism.

"In my mind it definitely was a hate crime from the start," says De Divitis. "If you're not a part of a marginalized community, you don't see the things that we do. I've seen the body language, heard the comments throughout my life. Others think that kind of stuff doesn't happen here in Niagara. Well, it does."

Continued on page 3
Lives Matter movement. “I don’t understand what is motivating this kind of be- haviour,” he said. “I can’t dig into this kind of hatred and vandalism. It’s too deep and too dark for me. We all be- lieve that we live in a society that is loving and caring. Peo- ple just want to lead a life that they’re comfortable and hap- py with. And then this non- sense comes along.”

For Old Town resident Ken Chan, the feeling of dis- appointment at seeing the latest hate message on the crosswalk was trampled by seeing his friends, neighbours and allies show their support Friday morning. “It reinforces the strength of this community,” insisted Chan. “When we are faced with hate, we are countering that with love and support for one another. We all recognize that Niagara-on-the-Lake is an inclusive community. We cannot let these kinds of acts deter us from who we are as a community.”

Chan said he believes the timing of the latest vandalism attack is symbolic of the escalation of hatred. He is certain that the perpetrator knew very well that the communi- ty would be coming together to counter Friday’s attack. “As a former police of- ficer,” he added, “I can say that this is now definitely a hate crime. We’ve seen it happen before where it starts with words and it escalates to physical violence. It is now time for the police to step up and send the message to the community that they are here for us all.”

As residents gathered at the intersection, town staff erected pylons and barriers to block cars from turning onto Anderson Lane. “Anybody who has a fam- ily member who is queer,” Schiff-Malins said to the group, “friends who are queer, or co-workers who are queer, which is everybody, should all stand together. Otherwise the message we’re giving is that whatever is expected is accepted, and it can’t be. And now they’ve included another group, with BLM on there. So who’s next?”

Coun. Maria Mavridis then expressed her displeasure at how many people showed up on such short notice. “We are one community, and we need to stand together in solidarity,” said Mavridis. “What happened this morn- ing is really disheartening. We need to be louder with our message versus this one.”

Schiff-Malins then orga- nized the group for a photo along the span of the cross- walk. Some of the supporters opted to lay down on top of the vandalism to signify that they won’t stand for such hateful messages. Speaking to The Local Lat- er, Mavridis also addressed the inclusion of the BLM ref- erence in the vandal’s recent attack. “When I saw that I thought, ‘really? So you just have hate for everybody?’” she remarked, “In my heart, I real- ly don’t think it’s someone who lives in this town. I don’t want to believe it, I really don’t.”

In an email to The Local, town CAO Marnie Cluckie said that these acts hurt, “the town will stand together for the idenity against this hateful- ness and show that Niagara- on-the-Lake will continue to fight for acceptance, respect and inclusivity for all people.”

She added that seeing the number of people coming together Friday morning was a powerful reminder of the strength of residents and NOTL’s commitment to re- spect, acceptance and under- standing.

Cluckie said the incident happened sometime before 4 a.m. Friday, and that the Ni- agara Regional Police Service has been alerted. An Aug. 4 press release from the NRPS confirms that this latest incident is being in- vestigated as a potential hate- based crime. The legal criteria for a charge under the Hate Propaganda sections of the Criminal Code are specific in scope and done in consulta- tion with the Ministry of the Attorney General. Once the NRPS investigation has con- cluded, investigators can pre- pare a report with the consent of the Niagara Crown’s Office for submission to the Attor- ney General of Ontario.

Anyone with information is asked to contact the lead detective at 905-688-4111, option 3, extension 100773. Anyone who wishes to pro- vide information anony- mously is urged to contact Crime Stoppers of Niagara online or at 1-800-222-8477. Cluckie added that in light of a nearby security camera being blanked out with paint prior to last Sunday’s vandal- ism, the town is exploring oth- er options to protect the com- munity’s rainbow crosswalk. As far as Schiff-Malins is concerned, if another act of vandalism occurs, “there will be others who will be right there, standing in support.”

“The only thing we can do is respond to it, to stand together,” she added. “We are acting to a bias that is full of hate and discrimination. Can you change people’s hearts or minds? Maybe not, but can we at least show support when these things happen? Yes we can. I will do this every single time if I have to.”
Pride Niagara: All four acts of vandalism were hate crimes

Continued from page 1

Pride Niagara and the larger 2SLGBTQIA+ community in the region were expected such an act to occur, as it has elsewhere in Niagara. But four incidents in about two months is more than he’s seen in St. Catharines, for example, where a Pride crosswalk was installed on St. Paul Street in 2021. De Divitis is a member of that city’s 2SLGBTQIA+ Advisory Committee.

Yet he says he could have predicted that last week’s fourth crime in NOTL was coming.

“The more you ignore the problem, the bigger it gets,” he says. “When the vandalism acts were just tire marks, people were thinking ‘maybe it’s just some kid horsing around. No damage, ignorance is ignorance. But when they start to damage the Town to get more involvement and ramp up their own response to the repeated damage or acts of hatred.

“It’s wonderful that the allies came out,” says De Divitis, “but they’re not the ones who will have to clean that crosswalk or monitor it. Municipalities have to get on it. If this happened at city hall, I think they would find out who did it immediately. What if this happened at the mayor’s own house?”

He also expressed disappointment that there wasn’t a bigger presence from town council at Friday’s rally. Councillors Tim Balasits and Maria Mavridis were there, as well as town staff, but the absence of Lord Mayor Gary Zalepa and other members of council was glaring in his eyes.

“I’ve seen it at the flag raisings we have done across Niagara,” he says. “The mayor often don’t show up. We often only get the female council members instead. A lot of the old school guys in council members instead. A lot of the old school guys or legislators often don’t show up. We say ‘how dare you speak up to me?’ That’s what makes them ask why they don’t get their own straight flag’ or their own ‘straight crosswalk.”

The symbolism of the Pride crosswalk is an important tool in the fight for equality. ‘It’s an actual reminder, ‘straight flag’ or their own ‘straight crosswalk’,” explains De Divitis, “to look in all directions. To look where you’re going. You actually have to pay attention. The fact that this is triggering you so much, that you have to acknowledge someone who may not look, act or live like you, that is a big problem.”

Ugly protests outside of venues holding drag queen events have become the norm. As well, in June, Pride Niagara joined others at both the Catholic and public school boards to counter-protest against anti-Pride demonstrators.

He warns that if this happens again in NOTL, and an even bigger group comes out to stand in unity and solidarity, they have to be ready for whatever might happen.

“With counter-protests, it’s very different,” he says. “The hate is right there, a quarter of an inch from your face, screaming at you, trying to start something violent with you. That’s the next step with something like this crosswalk. When you stand together, someone’s going to eventually come out to face you.”

The fact that about 100 people showed up at the crosswalk for a demonstration of unity and support last Friday pleases De Divitis. He wasn’t there for the gathering, though, and remains disappointed that no one contacted him to make him aware that it was happening.

But he’s hoping that the turnout convinces the Town to get more involved and ramp up their own response to the repeated damage or acts of hatred.

“The hate is right there, a quarter of an inch from your face, screaming at you, trying to start something violent with you. You acknowledge some who may not look, act or live like you, that is a big problem.”

The fact that this is triggering you so much, that you have to acknowledge someone who may not look, act or live like you, that is a big problem.”

Ugly protests outside of venues holding drag queen events have become the norm. As well, in June, Pride Niagara joined others at both the Catholic and public school boards to counter-protest against anti-Pride demonstrators.

He warns that if this happens again in NOTL, and an even bigger group comes out to stand in unity and solidarity, they have to be ready for whatever might happen.

“With counter-protests, it’s very different,” he says. “The hate is right there, a quarter of an inch from your face, screaming at you, trying to start something violent with you. That’s the next step with something like this crosswalk. When you stand together, someone’s going to eventually come out to face you.”

The highest volume in Niagara-on-the-Lake from 01/01/2011 to 09/21/2021. Source MLS.
The future home of historical artifacts inside Parliament Oak School was a subject of debate recently, as were the alleged historical inaccuracies on a commemorative panel at the site.

Those two items were part of a discussion of demolishing the school building during last Wednesday's Niagara-on-the-Lake municipal heritage committee meeting.

The demolition is part of a proposal from Two Sisters Resorts to build a luxury hotel on 1.6 hectares of King Street that marks one of the first sessions of Upper Canada Parliament in August 1783, for which the property is much celebrated.

That piece isn't part of current commemoration plans, which disappoints committee member David Snelgrove.

"I feel personally, this is an error. I think it's wrong," said Snelgrove, adding that even though there is speculation this session did not occur, the school was named "on the premise that it did happen, and that the panel should be part of a commemoration wall at the site." Lashla Jones, a heritage consultant who is part of the team behind the proposal, said they are "not contesting" that the parliament session took place at the site, but said "the dates and times don't add up," and that according to researchers, Sir John Graves Simcoe, who is said to have chaired the meeting, was not in the area at that time.

The commemoration plan included in the heritage committee meeting agenda, says that on Sept. 17, 1792, Graves Simcoe held the first session of parliament for the new colony of Upper Canada, and that the "exact location" of the first session of parliament is unknown.

Possible locations include Navy Hall, Butler's Barracks, the Freemasons' Hall, or a tent located under an oak tree at the present-day location of 325 King Street, the address of the school.

"However, it is generally acknowledged that Navy Hall served as the main parliament site of Upper Canada during this time," says the report.

The second session of Parliament of Upper Canada was held between May 31, 1793, and July 9, 1794, says the report before the committee.

Interpretive material on the concrete panel on the exterior walls of the former Parliament Oak School suggests that John Graves Simcoe presided upon a session of this parliament in August 1793, at the former school site under the shade of an oak tree.

"However, both the House of Assembly and Legislative Council were pro-rogued on July 9, 1793, and no further sessions of parliament were held until 1794," said the report prepared by Stantec Consulting Ltd.

Also, the diary of Elizabeth Simcoe indicates that she and John Graves Simcoe set sail for Toronto on July 29, 1793, and they remained in the Toronto area through September, according to the report.

"Therefore, it is unlikely that any parliamentary pro-ceeding took place under an oak tree at present-day 325 King Street in August 1793. Who should keep historical pieces on and in the school during demolition was another subject of the committee meeting.

Snelgrove suggested the municipality should have control of artifacts at the property, which are "at risk" without a plan of how to preserve them, citing a number of "unlikely but real" scenarios that could occur, such as change in ownership of the property, or the proponent going bankrupt.

"While everything is well intended at this point in time, things can change," he said, adding "there should be a mechanism in place to preserve the artifacts.

Denise Horne, the town's heritage planner, said that will be part of the developer's next submission in September, when a salvage and documentation plan is submitted.

Speaking to the debate over the accuracy of the panel regarding a session of parliament being held there, Horne said an additional plaque or panel could be explored to provide clarification.

"From staff's perspective, I think there's opportunity for further discussion," she said.

Sara Premi, Two Sisters' lawyer, also said more details about commemoration plans will be available next month, but that the committee has "no authority" to recommend heritage assets are transferred to the municipality. She suggested local governments often do not get involved in such a process due to the cost.

"I would encourage you to get advice from your own solicitor before you consider such a recommendation," Premi told Snelgrove.

David Ryker, from SGL Planning and Design, said a site plan will be submitted "very shortly," also agreeing with Premi that plans for commemorating the site's history will be included in that document.

Jones, Two Sisters' heritage consultant, agreed the salvage plan doesn't currently add up, explaining the exact locations of where artifacts will be stored, but "that's certainly something we will have more discussion on with the town." Along with the panels, other pieces the applicant has been asked to commemorate, salvage and preserve include a stone marker for a large oak tree on the property, a 1948 facade facing King Street, landscaping and trees, a mature red oak tree, an Underground Railroad art installation, an 1948 time capsule, Parliament Oak School lettering, as well as slate chalkboards, brick and hardware from the building.

The applicant says it will follow a "blended commemoration approach."

The focus should be two-fold: salvaging appropriate materials before demolition and then incorporation of these salvaged materials into the proposed redevelopment," reads the plan, included in the heritage committee meeting agenda.

"These materials should be interpreted for the public through commemorative panels and other similar interpretative material," the report says.

The salvaged bas-relief panel, tree panel, and Parliament Oak school name panel should be installed in the landscaped feature area of the north garden, using salvaged bricks and stone from the former school. "The time capsule should be displayed within the hotel lobby, or donated to the Niagara-on-the-Lake Museum," it continues.

A motion at the end of the discussion approved the plaque, also referring to a bas-relief panel, being included in commemoration plans, and that placing it near King and Centre streets would be considered.

One of the committee discussions was about the accuracy of the words about a meeting of parliament mentioned on this bas relief on the wall of Parliament Oak School. (Kris Dube)

Which artifacts will be kept, and who will keep them?

Heritage committee discussed Parliament Oak.
‘Smart comedy’ Playboy met with controversy in its early years

Sharon Burns
The Local

J.M. Synge’s The Playboy of The Western World, currently running at Shaw Festival, turns the concept of hero status on its head. Though the play was written in 1907, and set in the 1950s, it poses a timely question of why we need heroes, and what happens when heroes fail us.

Before the play even starts, fog rolls into an ale house near a village on the coast of Mayo. The sound of wind riding on the fog and carries into the pub a stranger who identifies himself as Christy Mahon (Shane Carty), who recently ran away from his home in County Mayo. The sound of wind and the village girls’ exclamations of awe, "What fine women fighting for the likes of me!" he exclaimed.

Perhaps fierce Pegeen (Marla McLean), to Widow Quin (Fiona Byrne), and even the village girls who bring him gifts of eggs and a "pat of butter", for till be a poor thing to have you eating your spuds dry, and you after running a great way since you did destroy your da’s.

The men also admire Christy’s exploits and exalt him to near-hero status, especially after he wins a village donkey race on the slowest donkey. Christy is surprised that the villagers feel awe, not revulsion, for a man who committed parricide. “Two fine women fighting for the likes of me!” he exclaimed.

Pegeen mourns her loss in the last line of the play: “Oh my grief, I've lost him surely. I've lost the only playboy of the western world.” It's fitting that Irish-born Canadian Jackie Maxwell, artistic director from 2003 to 2016, returned to Shaw to direct this play, written by the Irish Synge in 1871 and staged in the Jackie Maxwell Studio Theatre.

Maxwell set the play in the 1950s, where the grim economic conditions in rural Ireland closely matches Synge’s setting. Originally destined for the Shaw stage in 2020, Playboy was shelved until after the pandemic. The theatre-in-the-round configuration of the Studio is maximized with a simple but evocative stage of bar counter, stools and bench, a warm hearth and comfortable chair. The Playboy of the Western World, a smart comedy, is also a commentary on rural life in early 1900s Ireland. Fierce protests met the debut of Playboy in Dublin’s Abbey Theatre in 1907. Similar controversy followed for the next few years as the play moved to North America.

Synge, in a preface to his play, recalls the rich and living language of the servant girls while writing The Shadow of the Glen. “In a good play every speech should be as fully flavoured as a nut or apple, and such speeches cannot be written by anyone who works among people who have shut their lips on poetry.”

The heavy Irish, yet melodic brogue, was difficult to understand at times, however the skill of the actors made sure meaning was conveyed in movement, tone and facial gesture.

Fiona Byrne as Widow Quin, Qasim Khan as Christy Mahon and and Ric Reid as Old Mahon in The Playboy of the Western World. (Shaw Festival, Emily Cooper)

Jade Repeta as Susan Brady, Kiana Woo as Honor Blake and Alexandra Gratton as Sara Tansey in The Playboy of the Western World (Shaw Festival, Emily Cooper)

Marla McLean as Pegeen Mike, Fiona Byrne as Widow Quin and Qasim Khan as Christy Mahon. (Shaw Festival, Emily Cooper)

Qasim Khan as Christy Mahon, Jonathan Tan as Philly O’Cullen, Andrew Lawrie as Shawn Keogh, Sanjay Talwar as Michael Flaherty and Shane Carty as Jimmy Farrell. (Shaw Festival, Emily Cooper)
One generation needs to provide safe journey for the next

8 August 2023
notlocal.com

Smaller siblings of Niagara Gorge and their seasonal secrets

By Owen Bjorgan The Local

What descriptive words do you conjure up when describing the Niagara Gorge? The words are often romantic and intense in nature. Mighty, ancient, massive, extreme and world-class. All of these adjectives accolades are well deserved.

The Niagara Gorge’s walls are an average of 70 metres high, scaling rock layers that are approximately 420 million years old. However, it took a relatively mere 12,000 years for Niagara Falls to erode its way somewhat compared to its current location.

There are also at least a dozen other gorges that are smaller in stature within the Niagara Region, which deserve equal attention for their appreciable accomplishments.

Perhaps you have heard of, or even visited, Decew Falls, Terrace Creek Falls, Rockway Falls, or Beamers Falls along the Niagara Escarpment. All of these naturally protected areas share the exact same rock layers that are exposed in the great Niagara Gorge, meaning their associated canyons are just as old. They are simply not as deep or wide, but its hard to compete with your bigger self when it pours enough water over the brink to fill millions of bathtubs per minute.

There just isn’t the same water volume with the other locations, yet these spots are just as old and beautiful as the Niagara Gorge. That almost makes it more fascinating to me and the guests I love showing these spots to, the wee little gorge they are looking at is just as aged as the Niagara River’s erosive work, including the same types of rock and associated habitats. It’s almost like you have a metre tall cedar tree can be just as old as the 30-metre tall tulp tree. Another key difference is that the smaller waterfalls may see a few hundred or thousand visitors a year, while the larger falls are preserved for the enjoyment of our shoulder seasons and the tourists, then your tip of these natural wonders.

Some of these waterways have taken their thousands of years to incise their way into the Niagara Escarpment’s foundation.

While Lake Ontario heats up like a bath tub in the summer months, an interesting phenomenon takes place come fall. As our average air temperature begins to drop, the lake takes considerably longer to cool down. Therefore, it wafts its relatively warm air up into these protected gorges, where the warmer air becomes entrapped for a period of time. This creates a remarkable temperature difference that you can feel on your own skin and cells as you stand on the chilly Niagara Escarpment top. It is exhilarating and you choose to step down into one of the small gorges, you will likely notice a pleasant warm ambience.

Sometimes, these temperature differences can be as great as five degrees Celsius. The exact opposite situation unfolds every spring. As Canadians embrace the first T-shirt days of the year, Lake Ontario’s frigid waters blow cooler air into these gorges, once again leaving such air masses stuck in the valleys. You could experience a warm breeze up top, and would have to apply your sweater once again if you were to descend lower, where snow and ice takes longer to melt in the rocky chains and waterways.

I find this relationship between land and water fascinating, and there is a great satisfaction in not only understanding the process, but then feeling the proof of it every spring and fall. Wonderful, powerful and qui et processes like this surround us in the unique landscape of Niagara. Go for a hike on one of our shoulder seasons and experience the sensation for yourself!
At the time of year we were visiting the area, and a newly opened building had a small museum called the Natural History. This information was there to have pulled in at Cap-Pele, New Brunswick. We accessed Kouchibouguac National Park along the main roads around the NOTL. With the range of natural environments, numerous trails, rich Miramichi and Acadian history of this area, the park, although difficult to pronounce, is an excellent one to put on a visit list.

David Gilchrist and his wife Claudia enjoyed the scenery at one last stop out east, at Kouchibouguac National Park, before heading to the other side of the country. (David Gilchrist)
Recent heavy rain reinforces need for work in Dock Area

Penny Coles
The Local

Rom Simkus has been keeping close tabs on the water levels of Lake Ontario since areas of the town were flooded in 2017, and again in 2019. The retired mining engi- neer has spoken extensively with town staff in recent years about the need to protect the Dock Area from future flood- ing, to the extent that he jokes sometimes he has to remind himself, and others, that he doesn't work for the town.

When heavy rain last week, accompanied by thunder and lightning, caused flooding in some parts of Niagara-on-the-Lake, said Simkus, it caused the level of Lake Ontario to rise by half an inch, defying the floodwall and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. They are now expecting a drop of six inches in the next 30 days, Simkus told his 100 or so recipients of an email he sends out weekly to explain lake levels to residents, particularly those in the Dock Area.

But although that bodes well for the rest of this season, Simkus, reached in Ottawa to talk to The Local, said he believes strongly that disaster mitigation is paramount for the future, rather than waiting for the flooding of 2017 and 2019 to occur again.

The good news is that after Simkus lobbying the town for several years, a rain harvester was installed this spring in the eastern end of the Dock Area parkette as part of a stormwa- ter drainage initiative. "And it worked. We had a heck of a rainstorm, and the rain har- vester filled up just the way it was designed to do." The town is in good hands with the recently hired director of operations Rome D’Angelo, who knows what needs to be done in the Dock Area, said Simkus, and has been pursuing a federal grant to help fund the work, estimated at about $5 million.

"He understands it’s not a matter of if, it’s a matter of when, and it has to be done."

Simkus has been concerned about Ricardo Street by Nelson Park since it was underwater for days, stretching into weeks, in 2017. It necessi- tated road detours as storm- water sewers couldn’t drain water fast enough, causing the stormwater sewers and septic sewer lines to "co-mix and utterly overwhelm the sewer pumping station on the south side of the street."

Fortunately, last week, he said, the level of Lake Ontario remained low enough that the stormwater surge reached the lake on its own, and the sewage pumps continued to do their job, averting the need for other measures the town had to employ in 2017, and again two years later.

Some lessons were learned from the first flooding, allowing the town to be better prepared the second time around, but there are measures that could and should be taken in prepara- tion for when it happens again, as he said, it surely will. Although there are ways to predict when it could happen again, there is no way to know how high the lake will rise and how damaging it will be. The records that would help de- termine what to expect don’t go back far enough or provide enough information, he explained.

With the possibility of a fed- eral grant on the horizon, the town should be ready to move forward on putting mitigating plans into place, Simkus said. In 2017 and again in 2019, the town rented expensive por- table pumps in three Dock Area locations to manage stormwa- ter. One was used on Ricardo Street, he said, the second at the foot of Melville Street to pump water into the Niagara River by the public dock, and the third was at the west end of River Beach Drive, used to lift water from inside the parkette to the Niagara River.

He also mentioned the new condominium development now under discussion for Mel- ville Street, and said during one meeting he seemed the only one concerned that any units on the ground floor would be vulnerable to flooding — they would be right in the path of the stormwater if the lake should rise as it has twice al- ready. The town didn’t think that there would be a problem, but the conversation left the devel- oper scrambling to come up with a solution.

Simkus would like to see the town purchase high-quality, portable electric pumps which can be brought out for use when and where they’re need- ed. NOTL Hydro can ensure the outlets are close enough and available for use when the pumps are put to work. "In 2017, everybody was blinded," he said. "This time we can be prepared."

He recalls Prime Minister Justin Trudeau coming to town in 2017 — it was World Envi- ronment Day — and paddling a kayak along the waterfront for a photo opportunity. Sim- kus says he tried to point out all the sandbags that were trying to protect the shoreline, "and he looked the other way."

Since then the federal gov- ernment, he added, seems to have woken up and come to the realization that it’s cheaper to spend money on disaster mitigation rather than "replac- ing everything for everybody" with disaster relief money.

And it would be well spent in NOTL on pumps to have ready when needed.

There is a feasibility study approved by the town in 2020 to address a permanent solu- tion for pumping in the Dock Area when the lake level reaches a point that’s necessary, but nothing has been done since. Simkus is hoping to see a de- sign soon.

His other concern is hav- ing some work done in River Beach Park. Despite some doubts expressed to him that the parkette rain harvester would work, it has been proven successful in the recent heavy rain. He hopes the town will now consider another simi- lar installation in River Beach Park, as part of an overall plan for the future.

The rain harvester also acts as natural filter for storm- water drainage to help reduce contaminants reaching Lake Ontario, and to filter out silt during heavy rain.

In addition, the steel facing along the shoreline of River Beach Park has a large hole in it and needs repairing, and the municipal parking lot needs to be a permeable design to cap- ture water, said Simkus, two projects that typically go side- by-side.

With so many variables and not enough historic infor- mation to predict exactly how high the highest lake level is likely to reach, he says, "you can’t eliminate disaster occur- ring, but you can mitigate it, and lessen the rain."

The rain harvester in the parkette flooded, but worked, helping the water to drain away as it was supposed to. (Supplied)
Niagara episode of Amazing Race airs Tuesday

Mike Balsom
The Local

Welland native Mark Lysakowski, an executive producer of CTV’s The Amazing Race Canada, couldn’t wait for the reality program to finally return to the Niagara Region.

“In season one, Niagara Falls was the very first place we opened up on,” Lysakowski says. “We filmed that from a helicopter, showcasing one of the seven wonders of the world to begin the whole series.”

The Welland Centennial Secondary School graduate has been with The Amazing Race Canada from the beginning. The program has taken him from coast to coast to cover, during which Pelton native Gracie Lowes and her teammate Lily Bateman were unfortunately eliminated, a teaser for the August 15 show revealed footage of competitors rowing and driving grape harvesters.

Lysakowski admits that the rowing took place at Welland’s International Flatwater Centre.

“I felt the need to showcase the Welland Canal,” Lysakowski adds. “When I was a kid I swam in the canal. And I promise you that our teams will be stopped by the bridges along the canal. Everyone in the Niagara region knows if you hit a bridge, you get a 45-minute wait.”

Lysakowski goes on to recount his own experience with the bridges in his younger days.

“My orthodontist was in Niagara Falls,” he says. “I had a deal with my mom that if we hit the bridge then I didn’t have to go to the appointment. My mom (a retired math teacher and guidance counselor from Welland Centennial) would let me out of it.

“Like most reality television shows, much is kept secret before each episode is aired. But Lysakowski does reveal some particulars.

“We cover St. Catharines, Pelham, Niagara-on-the-Lake and my hometown, Welland,” he says. “I wouldn’t be welcome back in my hometown if I didn’t include Welland.”

Production photos provided by CTV show the racers near the historic British Methodist Episcopal Church on Geneva Street in the Gardens City. As well, at the end of last Tuesday’s episode, amazing race canada contestants Tyler and Kayleen get their next clue from Niagara Black history expert Natasha Bell inside the BME Church in St. Catharines. (Photos supplied)

Show host Jon Montgomery drops in at the General Motors plant.

“The Niagara episode was shot back in May. NOTL resident Tracey Frena spied the cast and crew one day convening around Fort Mississauga and stuck around long enough to convince host Jon Montgomery to pose for a selfie with her and her daughter Rachel.

“Jon is our ambassador for our program,” says Lysakowski. ‘He’s fantastic, that’s what he does. He is the most recognized person and he does so much for us. He loves to pose for photos and talk to people.’

The ‘travelling circus,’ as Lysakowski calls it, consists of about 86 people in total, including cast and crew. When they roll into an area such as Niagara, their shooting schedule is usually spread out over a two-day period. And they do a great job of connecting with local residents and dignitaries.

“In St. Catharines,” hints Lysakowski, “we worked with a very important member of that community. We were thrilled to be welcomed in, and I think when people see it I’m sure they’ll get it. It takes me way, way back to my youth.”

To see exactly how Niagara is showcased, tune into The Amazing Race Canada next Tuesday, Aug. 15 at 9 p.m. on CTV, or watch on the CTV mobile app or website.

The Niagara episode of Amazing Race airs Tuesday

Mike Balsom
The Local

Welland native Mark Lysakowski, an executive producer of CTV’s The Amazing Race Canada, couldn’t wait for the reality program to finally return to the Niagara Region.

“In season one, Niagara Falls was the very first place we opened up on,” Lysakowski says. “We filmed that from a helicopter, showcasing one of the seven wonders of the world to begin the whole series.”

The Welland Centennial Secondary School graduate has been with The Amazing Race Canada from the beginning. The program has taken him from coast to coast to cover, during which Pelton native Gracie Lowes and her teammate Lily Bateman were unfortunately eliminated, a teaser for the August 15 show revealed footage of competitors rowing and driving grape harvesters.

Lysakowski admits that the rowing took place at Welland’s International Flatwater Centre.

“I felt the need to showcase the Welland Canal,” Lysakowski adds. “When I was a kid I swam in the canal. And I promise you that our teams will be stopped by the bridges along the canal. Everyone in the Niagara region knows if you hit a bridge, you get a 45-minute wait.”

Lysakowski goes on to recount his own experience with the bridges in his younger days.

“My orthodontist was in Niagara Falls,” he says. “I had a deal with my mom that if we hit the bridge then I didn’t have to go to the appointment. My mom (a retired math teacher and guidance counselor from Welland Centennial) would let me out of it.

“Like most reality television shows, much is kept secret before each episode is aired. But Lysakowski does reveal some particulars.

“We cover St. Catharines, Pelham, Niagara-on-the-Lake and my hometown, Welland,” he says. “I wouldn’t be welcome back in my hometown if I didn’t include Welland.”

Production photos provided by CTV show the racers near the historic British Methodist Episcopal Church on Geneva Street in the Gardens City. As well, at the end of last Tuesday’s episode, amazing race canada contestants Tyler and Kayleen get their next clue from Niagara Black history expert Natasha Bell inside the BME Church in St. Catharines. (Photos supplied)

Show host Jon Montgomery drops in at the General Motors plant.

“The Niagara episode was shot back in May. NOTL resident Tracey Frena spied the cast and crew one day convening around Fort Mississauga and stuck around long enough to convince host Jon Montgomery to pose for a selfie with her and her daughter Rachel.

“Jon is our ambassador for our program,” says Lysakowski. ‘He’s fantastic, that’s what he does. He is the most recognized person and he does so much for us. He loves to pose for photos and talk to people.’

The ‘travelling circus,’ as Lysakowski calls it, consists of about 86 people in total, including cast and crew. When they roll into an area such as Niagara, their shooting schedule is usually spread out over a two-day period. And they do a great job of connecting with local residents and dignitaries.

“In St. Catharines,” hints Lysakowski, “we worked with a very important member of that community. We were thrilled to be welcomed in, and I think when people see it I’m sure they’ll get it. It takes me way, way back to my youth.”

To see exactly how Niagara is showcased, tune into The Amazing Race Canada next Tuesday, Aug. 15 at 9 p.m. on CTV, or watch on the CTV mobile app or website.
New St. Andrew’s pastor welcomed to NOTL

Mike Balsom
The Local

For new pastor Bernie Skelding, the first 2023 installment of St. Andrew’s Presbyterian Church’s annual Gateau and Grace gatherings last Wednesday couldn’t have come at a better time.

The informal evening allowed him and his wife Jenn to share cake and conversation with congregants and visitors from the Niagara-on-the-Lake community just a few days before officiating his first Sunday service at the historic Greek Revival-style church.

Skelding comes to St. Andrew’s from the Vancouver, B.C. suburb of Coquitlam, though having grown up in Stoney Creek, he is very familiar with the area.

Formerly a psychotherapist, Skelding left the calling many years ago and became an ordained minister about 19 years ago.

“I went and took some courses,” he says, “and just continued down that path. I realized quickly that that was what I was supposed to be doing.”

Interestingly, he sees some similarities between his former occupation and his current one.

“It’s sort of a body and soul kind of thing,” says Skelding. “In psychotherapy, the therapist-patient relationship is really paramount. And in a pastoral role, the minister-parishioner relationship is critical. There are a lot of skills that overlap.”

He recognizes the differences, as well, in that one aids in physical well-being while the other focuses on spiritual well-being.

“But there’s a dialogue between the body and the soul,” he says. “They’re connected. The health of one impacts the other.”

Skelding began his psychotherapy practice in the Kitchener-Waterloo area, then moved on to Toronto before settling in Hamilton. It was in that city where he became ordained. The first church of his own was also called St. Andrew’s, in Wingham, Ontario.

He was there for about 11 years before moving out west. Skelding takes over from interim minister Clyde Ehme, who led St. Andrew’s since spring 2021. He was instrumental last Monday following a search by a committee under the auspices of the Presbytery of Niagara that began last summer.

He and Jenn, who have three adult children, feel fortunate to be settling in with the St. Andrew’s community here in NOTL.

“It’s such a beautiful community,” says Skelding, “and I’ve experienced St. Andrew’s to be a hospitable, welcoming, beautiful congregation of people. They’re really welcomed us with open arms. I’m looking forward to getting to know them and to walking with them.”

The Gateau and Grace events, held each year during the month of August, finds participants gathering on the front lawn of the Simcoe Street church to sample some cake and engage in casual conversation. The Skeldings were very busy meeting the congregants for the very first time.

“I was really focusing on trying to learn as many names as I could,” Skelding tells The Local with a chuckle.

Following the first half hour on the lawn, the crowd moved inside to enjoy the music of Marcela Lagunas Bergos and Luis Gerardo Molina, a cellist and pianist, originally from Mexico and now residing in Ontario. St. Andrew’s music director James van den Brink is responsible for organizing the musicians for the series of Wednesday events.

“I’m really excited for the congregation,” van den Brink says of working with Skelding. “The church has been reinvigorated. The congregation has been able to articulate its identity through a renewal process and through our ministry of music and events like this, and we hope to see the congregation grow.

Likewise, Skelding is looking forward to working alongside van den Brink.

“He is extremely gifted in so many ways,” says Skelding. “He’s just a delight to get to know and to begin working with.”

And for Skelding, moving back to Niagara has made him a bit nostalgic for one of his favorite delicacies, licorice ice cream from the old Stoney Creek Dairy that began in 1991.

The dairy parlour there that is a retirement home now. “There’s a little dairy parlour there that is open to the public. We have already been there to enjoy some of their ice cream.”

There are two more Gateau and Grace events coming up this month. On Aug. 16, baritone Johan Vannittersum will be singing, accompanied by John Weibe on viola and guitar. And Niagara Sympho- ny’s Zoltan Kalman, the orchestra’s principal clarinetist, will be featured on Aug. 30.

The events begin on the lawn at 7 p.m., are open to the public and free of charge. Donations to the church are encouraged.

The region is installing a crosswalk from Anderson Lane across Mississauga Street.

Mike Balsom
The Local

Crews from Beam Excavating have begun work installing a new pedestrian crossing at Mississauga Street near Anderson Lane.

Jeff Black, associate director of traffic and systems at Niagara Region says the location was pinpointed by residents of NOTL, as an area of need, largely due to the presence of the NOTL Community Centre, the NOTL Public Library and the Niagara Nursery School on Anderson Lane.

Black confirms that the crossing will feature flashing lights, pavement markings, and signage warning motorists from both directions that a pedestrian crossing is near.

Motorists will be expect- ed to stop when the lights are flashing.

As that section of Mississauga Street is a regional road, the cost of the installa- tion is borne by that level of government. Black expects the work on the new cross- ing to be done in about two months.
Don’t miss out on a peach of a celebration this weekend!

SUNDAY AT ST. VINCENT DE PAUL PARISH 10–3PM

- Whole peach pies will be available for sale starting at 10 a.m.
- BBQ Lunch & Dessert featuring everything PEACH: sundaes, crepes & pie slices with ice cream
- Kid’s corner: face painting & Hal from Halaloo with his famous balloon twisting (at noon)
- Music from noon until 3 by Jon Libera
- Bake, jam, jewelry, book and bazaar tables PLUS fresh peaches for sale donated by local farmers.

Peach Pie Contest

Bring your masterpiece to 26 Queen St lower level on Aug 12 from 10-11 am for a chance to win!

SOUR’S PEACH GIN

Perfect on turkey or beef sliders!

Recipe Corner by Irish Harp

PERFECT PEACH PARFAIT
Vanilla yogurt
sliced almonds
granola
Niagara peaches

PEACH CHUTNEY
Niagara peaches
salt
pepper
sugar
Perfect on turkey or beef sliders!

PERFECT PEACH PARFAIT

Vanilla yogurt
sliced almonds
granola
Niagara peaches

PEACH CHUTNEY
Niagara peaches
Crushed chili
cumin
pepper
sugar
Perfect on turkey or beef sliders!

Recipe Corner by Irish Harp

PERFECT PEACH PARFAIT
Vanilla yogurt
sliced almonds
granola
Niagara peaches

PEACH CHUTNEY
Niagara peaches
salt
pepper
sugar
Perfect on turkey or beef sliders!

PERFECT PEACH PARFAIT
Vanilla yogurt
sliced almonds
granola
Niagara peaches

PEACH CHUTNEY
Niagara peaches
salt
pepper
sugar
Perfect on turkey or beef sliders!

PERFECT PEACH PARFAIT
Vanilla yogurt
sliced almonds
granola
Niagara peaches

PEACH CHUTNEY
Niagara peaches
salt
pepper
sugar
Perfect on turkey or beef sliders!

Recipe Corner by Irish Harp

PERFECT PEACH PARFAIT
Vanilla yogurt
sliced almonds
granola
Niagara peaches

PEACH CHUTNEY
Niagara peaches
salt
pepper
sugar
Perfect on turkey or beef sliders!

SOUR’S PEACH GIN

Perfect on turkey or beef sliders!

Recipe Corner by Irish Harp

PERFECT PEACH PARFAIT
Vanilla yogurt
sliced almonds
granola
Niagara peaches

PEACH CHUTNEY
Niagara peaches
salt
pepper
sugar
Perfect on turkey or beef sliders!

PERFECT PEACH PARFAIT
Vanilla yogurt
sliced almonds
granola
Niagara peaches

PEACH CHUTNEY
Niagara peaches
salt
pepper
sugar
Perfect on turkey or beef sliders!

PERFECT PEACH PARFAIT
Vanilla yogurt
sliced almonds
granola
Niagara peaches

PEACH CHUTNEY
Niagara peaches
salt
pepper
sugar
Perfect on turkey or beef sliders!

Recipe Corner by Irish Harp

PERFECT PEACH PARFAIT
Vanilla yogurt
sliced almonds
granola
Niagara peaches

PEACH CHUTNEY
Niagara peaches
salt
pepper
sugar
Perfect on turkey or beef sliders!

PERFECT PEACH PARFAIT
Vanilla yogurt
sliced almonds
granola
Niagara peaches

PEACH CHUTNEY
Niagara peaches
salt
pepper
sugar
Perfect on turkey or beef sliders!

Recipe Corner by Irish Harp

PERFECT PEACH PARFAIT
Vanilla yogurt
sliced almonds
granola
Niagara peaches

PEACH CHUTNEY
Niagara peaches
salt
pepper
sugar
Perfect on turkey or beef sliders!

Recipe Corner by Irish Harp

PERFECT PEACH PARFAIT
Vanilla yogurt
sliced almonds
granola
Niagara peaches

PEACH CHUTNEY
Niagara peaches
salt
pepper
sugar
Perfect on turkey or beef sliders!

Recipe Corner by Irish Harp

PERFECT PEACH PARFAIT
Vanilla yogurt
sliced almonds
granola
Niagara peaches

PEACH CHUTNEY
Niagara peaches
salt
pepper
sugar
Perfect on turkey or beef sliders!

Recipe Corner by Irish Harp

PERFECT PEACH PARFAIT
Vanilla yogurt
sliced almonds
granola
Niagara peaches

PEACH CHUTNEY
Niagara peaches
salt
pepper
sugar
Perfect on turkey or beef sliders!

Recipe Corner by Irish Harp

PERFECT PEACH PARFAIT
Vanilla yogurt
sliced almonds
granola
Niagara peaches

PEACH CHUTNEY
Niagara peaches
salt
pepper
sugar
Perfect on turkey or beef sliders!

Recipe Corner by Irish Harp

PERFECT PEACH PARFAIT
Vanilla yogurt
sliced almonds
granola
Niagara peaches

PEACH CHUTNEY
Niagara peaches
salt
pepper
sugar
Perfect on turkey or beef sliders!

Recipe Corner by Irish Harp

PERFECT PEACH PARFAIT
Vanilla yogurt
sliced almonds
granola
Niagara peaches

PEACH CHUTNEY
Niagara peaches
salt
pepper
sugar
Perfect on turkey or beef sliders!
Sharon Burns

The Local

You don’t think of blacksmithing as a typical hobby for a 10-year-old girl, but Evelyn Blythin is learning early — and has a small burn on her arm to prove it.

Her father is blacksmith Neil Blythin, who was demonstrating his skill at the Niagara-on-the-Lake Museum Past in Present Heritage Festival Monday, talking to The Local while busy bellowing air into a charcoal fire.

A full-time electrician by trade, he explained, he’s been a part-time blacksmith for the last 12 years, after studying heritage blacksmithing at Willowbank School for Restoration Arts in Queenston. He’s now hoping to pass on his skill to his young daughter.

From the 1850s right up until the early 1900s, blacksmiths worked until the beginning of the First World War when factories soon replaced blacksmiths, Blythin said. “The blacksmiths made machines that replaced themselves.”

However, with the popularity of the reality TV series Forged in Fire, there’s been a resurgence in North America in traditional forging. “There are more blacksmiths today than there were back in 1800,” he said.

Blythin, a member of the Ontario Artist Blacksmiths Association, makes tools and hardware for the home, such as utensils and architectural pieces. “This seems to have a little bit of permanence. I can make something that my kids will be able to see,” he said.

Evelyn had just made her first attempt at blacksmithing a couple of days before the festival. Blythin said proudly, “I made a hook that looks like this,” said Evelyn, as she picked up a small metal hook from the table. “I made it to hang up my new blacksmithing hat.”

Many women and people of all ages are now involved in blacksmithing, explained Blythin. “It’s a great hobby. It’s also a potentially great career for some people. There’s a little bit of a barrier to entry and buying tools and equipment, but for a $1,000 investment and a bit of space...” Blythin said hopefully. “The blacksmithing process is very much like sculpting, if you get steel hot enough,” he added. “You can squish it, you can bend it, you can twist it. It’s just too hot to do it with your hands so we use tools.”

Evelyn explained that her dad was using charcoal in an antique rivet forge to heat steel because it “burns cleaner, but it makes sparks.” She turned over her arm to show a small burn made by scale, which is the outer layer of iron oxide that sometimes separates from the original piece as it is being hammered.

There were several people demonstrating skills of the past, including rug hookers from the St. Catharines Rug Hooking Guild. Linda Sullivan from St. Catharines, Janet Guy from St. Davids and Debbie Fes were all on hand to show traditional rug hooking. They meet and rug hook every week at the Older Adult Center in St. Catharines.

Musicians from the Niagara Old Tyme Fiddlers were also at the museum to entertain visitors. The Tiny Museum, a portable museum with changeable exhibits, was also at the event. A joint Ontario Trillium Foundation and Niagara Historical Society grant of $33,760 will allow the Niagara-on-the-Lake tiny museum to continue to travel to community events. Museum staff, announced Sarah Kaufman, the museum’s managing director and curator, will “take our Tiny Museum outside of the walls of the museum.”

The portable museum, which has a new exhibit each time it goes out, has appeared at fruit festivals and library pop-ups. The funding will ensure it continues to travel.

Quinn Ascah, assistant to Wayne Gates, MPP, rehanded to announce the grant, said “one thing that’s very important to the community here is cultural heritage, and preserving what’s so important and unique.”

In addition to the Tiny Museum on display at the heritage festival, other events included a treasure sale, antique firearms display, bake sale and free ice cream.
See faces as artist Nancy Wardle sees them

Nancy Wardle has always considered herself creative, but didn’t start focusing on painting until a few years ago, in 2017. Now she is featured in her first solo exhibit at the Niagara Pumphouse Arts Centre, with Face It, featuring her transition to portrait painting.

Having just moved to Niagara-on-the-Lake a few years earlier, she began taking art classes at the Pumphouse learning the fundamentals, and painting many landscapes, sunsets, vineyards and architecture over the next few years.

Gradually she started adding figures into her work. Last year she made the transition to portrait painting. Wardle started with her sister-in-law’s fun selfies, and then painted more of her family and relatives. In Florida during the winter, she enlarged her portrait base and began painting other people — she had found her niche.

Wardle discovered an American artist who had painted 180 faces of the people in her town. And so the idea came to Wardle to paint 60 portraits for her solo show at the Pumphouse.

Wardle works in oils and acrylics using reference photos. She paints what she loves, capturing the light on faces, and revealing the subjects’ personality and character and a moment of time in each portrait.

“I hope my work creates a space from the commotion of reality, for the viewer to gaze at the faces with curiosity and ponder what the story is behind the face,” Wardle says, “because face it: we all have a story.”

Wardle’s portraits are featured at the Niagara Pumphouse Arts Centre from Aug. 8 to 27, with an opening reception on Sunday Aug. 13, from 2 to 4 p.m.

So wander down to the Pumphouse in the next few weeks to view these portraits. What are some of the stories you see? What is your story?
To say that the Niagara Warehouse of Hope runs like a well-oiled machine is an incredible understatement.

At first glance, it was chaos. Volunteers’ cars were parked in every available space including the lawn, people seemed to come in and out of every corner of the 6,000-square-foot warehouse, and multiple phones rang over the whirl of sewing machines and the smell of soldering small electronics.

Upon closer look, however, the warehouse and the work that goes on within is a finely-tuned mechanism of volunteers doing exactly what they’re best at, right down to the synchronized coffee breaks.

This place is a wonder. The Warehouse of Hope was founded by Mary and Ted van der Zalm in 1989, when they began gathering and storing used items in the family’s garage for shipment to Tanzania.

In 1996, volunteers used mostly donated materials to erect the present building, on mostly donated materials to erect the present building, on a well-oiled machine is an incredible understatement. The Warehouse of Hope runs like a well-oiled machine is an incredible understatement. Warehouse of Hope runs like a well-oiled machine is an incredible understatement. Warehouse of Hope runs like a well-oiled machine is an incredible understatement. Warehouse of Hope runs like a well-oiled machine is an incredible understatement.

The warehouse is a place of work, of play, of community. It is a place where people come together to do meaningful work, to make a difference, to help others.

One afternoon, I happened to be there when a group of volunteers was assembling a container for shipment to Haiti. The volunteers were working on a conveyor belt, sorting and testing equipment before it’s shipped. (Sharon Burns)

The warehouse is a place of work, of play, of community. It is a place where people come together to do meaningful work, to make a difference, to help others.

One afternoon, I happened to be there when a group of volunteers was assembling a container for shipment to Haiti. The volunteers were working on a conveyor belt, sorting and testing equipment before it’s shipped. (Sharon Burns)

The warehouse is a place of work, of play, of community. It is a place where people come together to do meaningful work, to make a difference, to help others.

One afternoon, I happened to be there when a group of volunteers was assembling a container for shipment to Haiti. The volunteers were working on a conveyor belt, sorting and testing equipment before it’s shipped. (Sharon Burns)

The warehouse is a place of work, of play, of community. It is a place where people come together to do meaningful work, to make a difference, to help others.

One afternoon, I happened to be there when a group of volunteers was assembling a container for shipment to Haiti. The volunteers were working on a conveyor belt, sorting and testing equipment before it’s shipped. (Sharon Burns)

The warehouse is a place of work, of play, of community. It is a place where people come together to do meaningful work, to make a difference, to help others.

One afternoon, I happened to be there when a group of volunteers was assembling a container for shipment to Haiti. The volunteers were working on a conveyor belt, sorting and testing equipment before it’s shipped. (Sharon Burns)

The warehouse is a place of work, of play, of community. It is a place where people come together to do meaningful work, to make a difference, to help others.

One afternoon, I happened to be there when a group of volunteers was assembling a container for shipment to Haiti. The volunteers were working on a conveyor belt, sorting and testing equipment before it’s shipped. (Sharon Burns)

The warehouse is a place of work, of play, of community. It is a place where people come together to do meaningful work, to make a difference, to help others.

One afternoon, I happened to be there when a group of volunteers was assembling a container for shipment to Haiti. The volunteers were working on a conveyor belt, sorting and testing equipment before it’s shipped. (Sharon Burns)

The warehouse is a place of work, of play, of community. It is a place where people come together to do meaningful work, to make a difference, to help others.

One afternoon, I happened to be there when a group of volunteers was assembling a container for shipment to Haiti. The volunteers were working on a conveyor belt, sorting and testing equipment before it’s shipped. (Sharon Burns)

The warehouse is a place of work, of play, of community. It is a place where people come together to do meaningful work, to make a difference, to help others.

One afternoon, I happened to be there when a group of volunteers was assembling a container for shipment to Haiti. The volunteers were working on a conveyor belt, sorting and testing equipment before it’s shipped. (Sharon Burns)

The warehouse is a place of work, of play, of community. It is a place where people come together to do meaningful work, to make a difference, to help others.

One afternoon, I happened to be there when a group of volunteers was assembling a container for shipment to Haiti. The volunteers were working on a conveyor belt, sorting and testing equipment before it’s shipped. (Sharon Burns)
Couple donate complete series of books to Brock

Penny Coles
The Local

David Murray and Elizabeth Surtees are world traveller couples, so it's not surprising that a beautiful set of travel books, printed between 1901 and 1921, caught their eye.

Called the Twenty Shilling Series, the rare antiquarian books, travellingogues of their time, would have provided a wealth of information for travellers of the early 20th century, says Murray, as well as those who couldn't afford to travel. The books were sold by subscription for just 15 shillings in advance, a common method for selling books at that time so publishers knew in advance how many to print for subscription, which were guaranteed sales, and how many more they speculated they could sell.

Those sold after the subscription were 20 shillings, about a week's pay for a London worker, Murray says, so expensive for a book, but cheaper than a trip they couldn't afford to take.

"The couple's Twenty Shilling Series, 92 books collected over a period of about 15 years and the only complete set in Canada, has recently been donated to Brock University."

"We are book people, and have been for ages. As you approach the end of life, you look around and think, what's going to happen to all of this?" says Murray. "And you want something good to happen, rather than giving it to family that won't appreciate it. So you think of an institution that will value it, and use it for learning.

"Having donated books to Brock and to Laurier universities over the years, the couple decided to gift the series — each book featuring a place or country around the world, Murray explains, with one volume dedicated to Canada — to Brock for its library's Archives and Special Collections section.

"It will be looked after by them, and will be of scholarly value to the institution," he says.

The books, printed by publishing house Adam and Charles Black, based in London, England, are "well-decorated," says Murray, with high-quality colour plates, good writing and interesting covers. "You wouldn't see that kind of quality nowadays.

"They are books "you might have given as a Christmas present," says Murray, "or if you subscribed to them, accumulate with pride." It was very rewarding to the couple to build the collection, and important that it not be scattered, he said.

"We enjoyed having them. We are world travellers ourselves, and have been to many of these places. We could pick up one of these books and see how different they looked in 1922. We'll miss them, but with them at Brock, we can go and visit them any time.

Murray says he's sure if anyone knew they were there and called up Brock's special collections department, "they would be able to go and see them.

The books, he added, "are national treasures, and should be exhibited!" He found his first volume before meeting Surtees, he says, and they continued searching them out together. "Collecting rare books and attending book fairs — more common in pre-COVID days — have been favorite pastimes for the local couple, who met in a bookstore in Toronto, and bonded over their mutual art and travel interests, which also include art and travel.

They were both browsing Murray says, at a Yonge Street store that specialized in books on art. "I had been given two tickets to the opening of an art exhibition nearby. As a single gentleman, I welcomed the opportunity to go anywhere on a Monday night, which it was. This attractive, demure lady was there also looking at books, and I said, 'I've got these two tickets. I'll give you one if you would like to go.' I'm going, and you can have the other ticket."

He was trying not to sound like he was asking for a date, he says, and she agreed to go. "And that's how I met her." Surtees had homes in Toronto and Elora, Murray in Toronto, and although they saw each other socially for years, "we weren't an item," he says.

Eventually they were, although they weren't married until they came to live in Niagara, which was 2001, where they first lived on Johnston Street, downtown to Gage, "500 metres around the block," and at that time donated some paintings to Willowbank School of Restoration Arts. They have since moved to a new home on Four Mile Creek Road in St. Davids, where they live now.

The Twenty Shilling Series, Murray says, "was acquired over the years, one by one, at book fairs and bookstores, including one locally, in Port Colborne, a well-regarded antiquarian bookstore with books on all sorts of subjects.

Once you start a collection, Murray adds, "you say to yourself, you have to have the rest. We knew there was no full set in Canada, and we went to buy one. It was a complete book case." Murray says they have donated other books of value, including an atlas to Western University. He has an interesting story to tell in relation to the ceremony held to recognize that donation, when they came across a special Shakespeare exhibit at the university. There is one portrait thought to be the only depiction of William Shakespeare painted while he was alive, authenticated by many experts through years of research, Murray explains. It was exhibited for a time at the Royal Ontario Museum, and an artist bought a ticket, spent his time looking at the painting and taking in the details, and after five minutes of viewing it sketched what he remembered. After visit number four, he went home and painted a reproduction, or copy of what he saw, in exactly the same dimensions.

Murray tracked down the artist of the copy, asked if he could buy it, and when the artist named a three-figure price, it was his. There was never ever that one copy of the reproduction, he says, and when he was at Western, and saw the exhibit of Shakespeare, he decided to offer it to the university. After an appraisal, he was offered a tax receipt — for more than three figures, he adds — so it is now part of a special collection in Western, it too going to a good home.

Murray and Surtees are supporters of Brock, and have created two graduate student awards at the university. Also members of the Niagara Historical Society, the David C. Murray and Elizabeth Surtees/Niagara Historical Society Scholarship in the History of Niagara is awarded each year to a master's student in history carrying out research on a local history subject at Brock.

Retired as a labour arbitrator, Murray has also created the David C. Murray Scholarship in Political Science for a master's student planning to specialize in law, human resources and dispute resolution, including labour arbitration.

Some volumes of the Twenty Shilling Series are on display on the main floor of the Brock University Library until the end of August.

874 LINE 1 ROAD, NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE TOWN AND COUNTRY LIFESTYLE OFFERED FOR SALE: $949,000

SOLD

CONTACT ME AND DISCOVER THE REAL ESTATE SERVICE YOU DESERVE!

CINDI LOPORTI, REALTOR
905.329.0353
CINDI@MCGARRREaltor.com

Congratulations and Best Wishes to Harry and Barbara Flood
CELEBRATING THEIR
60th Wedding Anniversary
August 10th 1963
Have a great day and enjoy many, many more.

Mark love and hugs Greg, Luanne, and Gwendolyn Katherine and Tammy

Elizabeth Surtees and David Murray, with a few volumes of the Twenty Shilling Series on the shelf in their home beside Surtees (on the left side of the photo), have now donated the complete 92-book collection to Brock University. (Photo supplied by Brock University)
Erika Janzen exudes a youthful exuberance as she bounds into The Local’s Four Mile Creek Road office. She’s been invited to talk about her 50th year as a violinist with the Niagara Symphony Orchestra (NSO), and she couldn’t be happier about it.

Janzen has been a member of the NSO since she was in high school, when she was able to step from the Niagara Youth Orchestra right into a seat with what was at the time called the St. Catharines Civic Orchestra.

The mother of three boys first picked up a violin as a young student at Prince Philip Public School after becoming fascinated by the instrument during a music demonstration. She enrolled in the elementary music program, run at the time by Paul van Dongen, and continued until she got to Grade 9 at Dalewood.

“Bringing your violin to school just wasn’t cool then,” she laughs. “So I quit. Then my dad encouraged me to go to Laura Secord Secondary School for Grade 9. It was the best thing that ever happened in my life.”

Despite the popularity and prevalence of rock music, though perhaps surprisingly, it was the violin, and I really started working at it, “ Janzen says. “I wasn’t interested at all. I remember of all this music happening, and I wasn’t interested at all.”

She recalls meeting a music teacher who said, “We are very fortunate that this opportunity came my way. It’s still awesome to me that this is happening.”

Erika Janzen still can’t believe the good fortune that led to her 50-year affiliation with the Niagara Symphony Orchestra. (Supplied)

“We are very fortunate to have a hall like this in this area,” she says. “In the Thistle Theatre (now Brock’s St. Catharines Performing Arts Centre) there was such a small audience, too. It’s a great thing to have a hall like this in this area.”

And she feels lucky to have many colleagues with whom she has worked since 1971. “I’m here,’ she says, smiling. “I love that symphony. And I love the holiday concerts, too. It’s a great thing to see the audience enjoying them.”

Janzen calls the opening of Partridge Hall at the FirstOntario Performing Arts Centre an “OMG” moment for her work with the NSO.

“We are very fortunate to have a hall like this in this area,” she says. “In the Thistle Theatre (now Brock’s St. Catharines Performing Arts Centre) there was such a small audience, too. It’s a great thing to see the audience enjoying them.”

At the time, the youth orchestra was affiliated with the St. Catharines Symphony, which was a semi-professional organization then, Leonard Atherton, the conductor, often came to check out the younger musicians.

“They would sort of absorb youth orchestra musicians,” she explains. “That happened for me in Grade 12. They were starting an apprenticeship program, and I signed up for it. But at my first rehearsal that September they told me I was in.”

Janzen admits her first performances with the larger orchestra were a bit intimidating, but the experienced professional musicians welcomed the younger open arms.

“It was a pops concert at the Shaw Theatre,” Janzen recalls of her debut as the 12th of 12 violins. “I can’t remember what the theme was, but I know I only played in a couple of pieces for that concert. I think we got paid $2 for each rehearsal, and $5 for each concert back then.”

Following high school, Janzen earned her BA in music at Brock University. She fell in love with Peter Janzen, an electrician, and was married after graduation. Her affiliation with the symphony continued even as she did all the paperwork for her husband’s electrical business, run out of their Four Mile Creek Road home.

Music shaped the family’s lives through the years. The couple’s three boys all learned musical instruments, though perhaps surprisingly, it was the trumpet and French horns that they decided to take up, not any of the stringed instruments.

“I actually love brass,” she laughs. “We had brass at our wedding, when people expected we would have a string quartet.”

And Peter wasn’t a classical music fan when they first met. That changed quickly.

“He comes home and turns on the classical music station,” says Janzen. “He programs the classical music station in his car. And he’s a subscription holder (at NSO). He comes to all the concerts.”

The NSO’s past home) you often see the audience enjoying them, too. “It’s such a big part of my life,” she says. “They are just such amazing kids. I work with the juniors, the concert orchestra, as a music coach. COVID pretty much devastated us, but it’s starting to grow again. My work with them is really precious to me. I’ve been connected with them since 1971.”

She also knows how fortunate she has been to be able to play with a professional orchestra for 50 years right in her backyard. “It is a very good symphony,” she says. “There have been a few occasions when I haven’t been able to play because of an injury or a vacation. But I have attended those concerts, and I sat back and was so impressed. I’ve had some of my colleagues say they’ve had the same experience.”

And she feels lucky to have many colleagues with whom she has worked since 1971.

“I still look around me and say I can’t believe that I’m here,” she says, smiling. “I love it so much. Sitting in the middle of the orchestra, all this music happening around me, I wonder how this opportunity came my way. It’s still awesome to me this day.”
Busy weekend coming up for Music Niagara Festival

Mike Balsam
The Local

It’s a youth takeover for Music Niagara Festival as young rising stars of classical music share the spotlight in four performances from Aug. 11 to 13.

Featured in three of those concerts is violinist Emma Meirenken, a longtime student of Music Niagara’s founder and artistic director Atis Bankas. The 24-year-old virtuoso performs a solo recital at Grace United Church Friday evening, joins her fellow members of the Kiri Quartet for a performance at Grace United Church on Victoria Street Saturday, and returns to Grace United with the quartet for a masterclass Sunday afternoon.

Meirenken recently completed her Bachelor of Music degree at Philadelphi’s Curtis Institute of Music, where she studied with Ida Kavafian, an artist-member of the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center and former violinist of the Beaux Arts Trio. At Curtis, she was awarded the Milka Violin Artist Prize and was also the 2023 recipient of Yale’s Presser Foundation Graduate Award and a Sylva Gelber Foundation Award.

Meirenken is currently a Master of Music student at the Yale School of Music, under the tutelage of Augustin Hadelich, the winner of a 2016 Grammy Award for Best Classical Instrumental Solo. “Even after her 10 years of studies with me,” Bankas says, “she would come every Christmas break, every spring break, for a few weeks every summer to work on repertoire, while she was studying at those institutions. It’s always a pleasure to work with her.”

Bankas refers to Meirenken as a technical virtuoso. “She can do anything on the violin,” he raves. “Any-thing. The rest is all about finding her own voice and interpretation, to hone her performance skills. You can’t do that by just practising or performing for a teacher. You need to perform for audiences to command and understand what works and what doesn’t.”

In a PBS video available to watch online from the U.S. public broadcaster’s series On Stage with Curtis, Meirenken’s virtuosity is evident. But more importantly, she seems fully at ease in explaining to the audience the history and her reasoning behind choosing to perform pieces by Schubert and Bartok.

Music Niagara audiences have certainly been happy in recent years to provide important feedback to aid in Meirenken’s development as a performer. The young Toronto resident has been a perennial component in the festival’s line-up through both solo recitals and with the Kiri Quartet.

Roundout the quartet are cellist Matthew Christo-ves, violinist Jasmine Mengi-ja Lin, and violinist Lynn Sue-A-Quan. On Saturday, they will perform works by Canadian composer Alexina Louie and French composer Maurice Ravel. In addition, they will be joined by Music Niagara Festival Performance Academy alumni for Polish composer Mateusz Czarnowski’s STREETS, a work for 16 stringed instruments. Czarnowski’s composition won the Ambassador’s tREES, its annual prize for 16 stringed instrumental works.

The quartet returns to Grace United Church Sunday afternoon for a master-class. Music lovers are invited to attend to watch the four young musicians at work. Admission is on a pay-what-you-can basis.

The venue shifts to the beautiful Ironwood Cider House for the fourth Music Niagara event of the weekend Sunday evening. There, five talented students from Toronto’s Taylor Academy of the Royal Conservatory of Music and Glenn Gould School will showcase their talents.

“They are all violinists, my students at the Conservatory,” Bankas explains. “They’re all advanced, very, very good players, committed to violin playing.”

Along with works by well-known classical composers, the students will be performing the music of Eugene Ysaye, the Belgian violinist and composer whose groundbreaking violin sonatas were composed one hundred years ago.

“As a composer, he developed his own musical language,” explains Bankas. “He produced a number of great students and performers. He was revered by everybody, from every country.”

Indeed, Ysaye was known at the turn of the 20th century as the king of the violin. He was the principal violin of the Benjamin Bible orchestra, which later became the Berlin Philharmonic. It’s said that the likes of Franz Liszt and Clara Schumann often came to see him perform.

At 28 years old, he became a professor at the Brussels Conservatoire in his hometown, where he taught many of the greatest violinists of the time. Ysaye, a longtime friend of Claude Debussy, died in 1931 at 72 years of age.

“He didn’t compose operas or symphonies,” says Bankas, when asked why Ysaye is not more well-known. “It was always music for violins, or chamber music for viola. His six sonatas are known for their totally different musical language and technique. They still remain challenging for contemporary players.”

Of presenting his young students with such challenging

Emma Meirenken

Photos by

The Kiri Quartet, with whom Meirenken often appears.

Emma Meirenken with Atis Bankas of Music Niagara behind her (left).

$919,000 | 15 Crimson Drive, NOTL
Located in the Village of St. Davids. Original owners. Many custom upgrades, 6 appliances, California Shutters, custom blinds included. 2 bedrooms on main level, one presently used as den. Custom kitchen with island and bar stools included, formal dining area with a walk-out to private 16 x 12 ft deck with custom retractable opening. Dock area features custom plantations and a water fountain. The extra large green space in the rear increases privacy. Back inside there is a gas fireplace in the great room and ceiling fans in bedrooms and great room. Downstairs in the family room is a fireplace, vinyl plank flooring plus a large bedroom with a 10 x 10 walk-in cedar lined closet. Lower lever windows all have vinyl blinds. There is a large storage area plus rough for a future bath. Other features include a 3 stage water filter, central vac, double attached garage with automatic door opener, interlocking stone driveway and corner unit location provides extra windows for natural light with a bonus window over kitchen sink. MLS #40434955

CENTURY 21 Avmark Realty Limited
Office: (905) 935.7272 | Direct: (905) 988.8228
Web: Avmarkrealty.com
12 Church Street St. Catharines, ON L2R 3B3

Mark Avedesian, Broker of Record
Century 21 Avmark Realty Limited, Brokerage
Rosamond Goodwin could hardly contain her joy Thursday when she welcomed tennis lovers to the court on the property of Sam and Robin Rideic in Niagara-on-the-Lake. Behind her, encased in protective plexiglas, sat the 123-year-old Davis Cup, the tennis world’s most prestigious team prize.

“Get your head together,” she muttered to herself as she shuffled through her notes, clearly shaken by the magnitude of the event. “The reason we’re here, we have the Davis Cup, and Canada is the champion.”

As the crowd cheered, she went on.

“As if that wasn’t enough, Captain Canada,” she said, “the captain of Team Canada, Frank Dancevic, born and raised in Niagara Falls, is this your home, and this is your day. And Queen’s Royal Park, named in honour of a magnificent resort hotel that was built here in the 1860s, hosted some of the most prestigious and gala internationaal (tennis) tournaments.”

The location of the Rideic’s court, just across Front Street from the park, was chosen for its history, as it was at the Queen’s Royal Resort that the idea of a trophy for international play came about.

It was through Goodwin’s efforts that the trophy, won by the team of Felix Auger-Aliassime, Gabriel Duflo, Alexis Galarneau, Vasek Posipal and Denis Shapovalov, captain by shedding light on the idea that brought us the best parks tennis courts in all of the Niagara region and beyond, said Goodwin. “It was one of the best decisions that this council ever made. We’re so glad to have him here.”

After McDadi gave a vivid description of Canada’s breakthrough 2022 Davis Cup victory, he introduced the team captain by shedding light on his guidance at last year’s tournament in Spain.

“Frank and his team were on a mission,” said McDadi. “What happened on the court was not only a tribute to the team but to Frank’s leadership and the staff that helped prepare the team.”

Dancevic took to the microphone and talked about his early development as a player, driving around Niagara looking for an open court where he could get an hour or more in to practice. He would bring with him tape and string to repair the nets at some of the public courts. “I drove by one of my old practice grounds,” he laughed, “the Lions Club in St. Davids. I remember back in the day the courts were all crooked and you had to chase the balls into the forest. They’ve done a wonderful job repainting the courts to make it a wonderful place to train.”

Dancevic thanked his local coaches for his success, including Leslie Murch, Doug Carter and Dave Boland.

“They were always there, always welcoming,” said Dancevic. “They essentially made me into the player I became. Without everybody’s help, including Rosamond, it’s difficult to achieve great things.”

Dancevic called it “a miracle” to have the Davis Cup sitting in NOTL Thursday.

“Rosamond is one of the best decisions that this council ever made. We’re so glad to have him here.”

Following Thursday’s event, the Davis Cup made its way to Toronto’s Sobey’s Stadium where it was to go on display during Tennis Canada’s National Bank Open, which began this weekend.

“Tennis is so many obstacles that you have to face along the way,” he explained. “You have to have the right players, the energy, the chemistry, to have them play well at the right times. When one guy’s down, another has to step in. Everyone has to get along on the court, too. There are so many moving parts that make this happen.”

The ceremony concluded with Niagara Falls mayor Jim Diodati presenting Dancevic with a key to the Honeymoon City.

“This is the key to our hearts,” Diodati said, “as we welcome you back to Niagara. It’s one of a kind. Like you, there’s not another one in the world. As the ambassador of Canada for tennis, sportsmanship and as a champion, today it’s official, welcome home, thank you very much, you’ve made us proud.”

Tennis fan Ted Scott snaps a photo of the Davis Cup.

The location of the Ridesic’s court, just across Front Street from the park, was chosen for its history, as it was at the Queen’s Royal Resort that the idea of a trophy for international play came about.

It was through Goodwin’s efforts that the trophy, won by the team of Felix Auger-Aliassime, Gabriel Duflo, Alexis Galarneau, Vasek Posipal and Denis Shapovalov, captain by shedding light on the idea that brought us the best parks tennis courts in all of the Niagara region and beyond, said Goodwin. “It was one of the best decisions that this council ever made. We’re so glad to have him here.”

After McDadi gave a vivid description of Canada’s breakthrough 2022 Davis Cup victory, he introduced the team captain by shedding light on his guidance at last year’s tournament in Spain.

“Frank and his team were on a mission,” said McDadi. “What happened on the court to win was not only a tribute to the team but to Frank’s leadership and the staff that helped prepare the team.”

Dancevic took to the microphone and talked about his early development as a player, driving around Niagara looking for an open court where he could get an hour or more in to practice. He would bring with him tape and string to repair the nets at some of the public courts. “I drove by one of my old practice grounds,” he laughed, “the Lions Club in St. Davids. I remember back in the day the courts were all crooked and you had to chase the balls into the forest. They’ve done a wonderful job repainting the courts to make it a wonderful place to train.”

Dancevic thanked his local coaches for his success, including Leslie Murch, Doug Carter and Dave Boland.

“They were always there, always welcoming,” said Dancevic. “They essentially made me into the player I became. Without everybody’s help, including Rosamond, it’s difficult to achieve great things.”

Dancevic called it “a miracle” to have the Davis Cup sitting in NOTL Thursday.

“Rosamond is one of the best decisions that this council ever made. We’re so glad to have him here.”

Following Thursday’s event, the Davis Cup made its way to Toronto’s Sobey’s Stadium where it was to go on display during Tennis Canada’s National Bank Open, which began this weekend.

“Tennis is so many obstacles that you have to face along the way,” he explained. “You have to have the right players, the energy, the chemistry, to have them play well at the right times. When one guy’s down, another has to step in. Everyone has to get along on the court, too. There are so many moving parts that make this happen.”

The ceremony concluded with Niagara Falls mayor Jim Diodati presenting Dancevic with a key to the Honeymoon City.

“This is the key to our hearts,” Diodati said, “as we welcome you back to Niagara. It’s one of a kind. Like you, there’s not another one in the world. As the ambassador of Canada for tennis, sportsmanship and as a champion, today it’s official, welcome home, thank you very much, you’ve made us proud.”

Following Thursday’s event, the Davis Cup made its way to Toronto’s Sobey’s Stadium where it was to go on display during Tennis Canada’s National Bank Open, which began this weekend.

“Tennis is so many obstacles that you have to face along the way,” he explained. “You have to have the right players, the energy, the chemistry, to have them play well at the right times. When one guy’s down, another has to step in. Everyone has to get along on the court, too. There are so many moving parts that make this happen.”

The ceremony concluded with Niagara Falls mayor Jim Diodati presenting Dancevic with a key to the Honeymoon City.

“This is the key to our hearts,” Diodati said, “as we welcome you back to Niagara. It’s one of a kind. Like you, there’s not another one in the world. As the ambassador of Canada for tennis, sportsmanship and as a champion, today it’s official, welcome home, thank you very much, you’ve made us proud.”

Following Thursday’s event, the Davis Cup made its way to Toronto’s Sobey’s Stadium where it was to go on display during Tennis Canada’s National Bank Open, which began this weekend.

“Tennis is so many obstacles that you have to face along the way,” he explained. “You have to have the right players, the energy, the chemistry, to have them play well at the right times. When one guy’s down, another has to step in. Everyone has to get along on the court, too. There are so many moving parts that make this happen.”

The ceremony concluded with Niagara Falls mayor Jim Diodati presenting Dancevic with a key to the Honeymoon City.

“This is the key to our hearts,” Diodati said, “as we welcome you back to Niagara. It’s one of a kind. Like you, there’s not another one in the world. As the ambassador of Canada for tennis, sportsmanship and as a champion, today it’s official, welcome home, thank you very much, you’ve made us proud.”

Following Thursday’s event, the Davis Cup made its way to Toronto’s Sobey’s Stadium where it was to go on display during Tennis Canada’s National Bank Open, which began this weekend.

“Tennis is so many obstacles that you have to face along the way,” he explained. “You have to have the right players, the energy, the chemistry, to have them play well at the right times. When one guy’s down, another has to step in. Everyone has to get along on the court, too. There are so many moving parts that make this happen.”

The ceremony concluded with Niagara Falls mayor Jim Diodati presenting Dancevic with a key to the Honeymoon City.

“This is the key to our hearts,” Diodati said, “as we welcome you back to Niagara. It’s one of a kind. Like you, there’s not another one in the world. As the ambassador of Canada for tennis, sportsmanship and as a champion, today it’s official, welcome home, thank you very much, you’ve made us proud.”

Following Thursday’s event, the Davis Cup made its way to Toronto’s Sobey’s Stadium where it was to go on display during Tennis Canada’s National Bank Open, which began this weekend.

“Tennis is so many obstacles that you have to face along the way,” he explained. “You have to have the right players, the energy, the chemistry, to have them play well at the right times. When one guy’s down, another has to step in. Everyone has to get along on the court, too. There are so many moving parts that make this happen.”

The ceremony concluded with Niagara Falls mayor Jim Diodati presenting Dancevic with a key to the Honeymoon City.

“This is the key to our hearts,” Diodati said, “as we welcome you back to Niagara. It’s one of a kind. Like you, there’s not another one in the world. As the ambassador of Canada for tennis, sportsmanship and as a champion, today it’s official, welcome home, thank you very much, you’ve made us proud.”

Following Thursday’s event, the Davis Cup made its way to Toronto’s Sobey’s Stadium where it was to go on display during Tennis Canada’s National Bank Open, which began this weekend.
CARTER, HUGH BERNARD
APRIL 10, 1942 – AUGUST 5, 2023
Passed away, peacefully, at home in his sleep Saturday, August 5, 2023. Much loved and will be forever missed by his wife, Donna (nee Skeoch) and his daughter, Sarah and her husband, Jason Cheshire. Hugh is survived by his mother, Phyllis; predeceased by with father, Albert. Dear brother of Phillip, Mark (Linda), John, Tim, Elizabeth (Alex), Margo (Mark) and the late David. He will be missed by his sister-in-law Karen, brother-in-law, Jim (Marga) Skeoch and the late Robert Skeoch. Hugh’s an uncle to many nieces and nephews and their families.
Thanks to family, friends, nurses and PSW’s for their support during the last few months.
In honouring Hugh’s wishes cremation has taken place. A Celebration of Life to be held from 1-4 pm on Saturday, August 19, 2023 at the Kinsmen Hall, 430 King Street. N-O-T-L.
In lieu of flowers, memorial donations to Kinsmen Club of N-O-T-L, P.O. Box 222, Virgil, L0S 1T0, would be appreciated. Arrangements entrusted to Considerate Cremation & Burial Services, 26 Nihan Drive, St. Catharines (between Lake Street & Scott Street), 289-362-1144. Online condolences may be made at CCBSCares.ca

JACOB BENJAMIN JANZEN
APRIL 10, 1942 – AUGUST 5, 2023
It is with profound sadness and heavy hearts that we announce the sudden passing of Jake Janzen (“Sammy”, “Yash”) on August 5, 2023.
He leaves behind his wife (of 60 years) Maryann and children Allen & Susan, Annette & Larry, and Richard. He will be greatly missed by his grandchildren, Kalla (Alasdair) Daw, Dean (Kate) Janzen, Alyssa (Brandon) Benoit, Derrick Janzen, and Ally. As well as his great-grandchildren, Zoe & Ryan Daw, Madison & Emily Janzen, and Eloise Benoit. Jake was born on April 10, 1942, and grew up on a farm on Hunter Rd in Niagara. He is predeceased by his parents Henry & Mary Janzen and all his siblings, Henry, Rudy, John, Nick, George (infancy), Maryanne, Anita, Luise (in infancy) and Hilda. Jake had many stories about his growing up years. They were a lively bunch.
This past April Jake & Maryann celebrated 60 years together. Family was always his number one priority, and he loved them all. Jake loved life and had a happy personality. He often whistled while he worked and could do it in harmony to music. He liked to sing, dance and enjoyed listening to country and gospel music. He had a great sense of humor, a quick wit and enjoyed a good joke. Jake enjoyed Hockey (Die-Hard Leaf Fan). He played “the nets” in his youth and coached minor hockey for many years. Hockey was in the family DNA as both sons and grandsons played.
Jake worked for the Town of Niagara-on-the-Lake for 31 years. He started out as a labourer/heavy equipment operator and for the last 20 years as the Foreman for the Roads Dept. He often said, “I had the best job!” He has enjoyed 25 years of retirement, much of it spent doing odd jobs for family as well as having fun with family, friends, and fishing at the cottage. Jake also had many great family times in Florida, and many other trips across Canada and the US.
As per Jake’s wishes cremation has taken place. A private funeral will be held. A Celebration of Life will be held on Wednesday, August 23, 2023, at Caroline Cellars, 1010 Line 2 Rd. #358, Virgil, Ontario from 2-5 pm. In lieu of flowers, memorial donations may be made to Red Roof Retreat. Online condolences at tallmanfuneralhomes.ca

MITCHELL, PATRICIA MAY (NEE ROBERTS)
- Passed away peacefully while holding her loving daughter’s hand on Friday, August 4, 2023. Beloved wife of the late, Jack Mitchell (2013); and adored mother and best friend of Donna McIntyre. Predeceased by her parents Jessie and William Roberts and siblings: Jack, George, Joan and Bruce. She is survived by sisters Bettye Southworth and Irene Neppean; and brother Donald Roberts. Patricia will be dearly missed and lovingly remembered by family and friends. Cremation has taken place. At Patricia’s request, there will be no visitation or service. In lieu of flowers, a memorial donation to the charity of your choice would be appreciated by the family.
“To the world she was just one person, but to one person she was the world.” Online Condolences – www.georgedartefuneralhome.com
Angelika & ASSOCIATES
LUXURY REAL ESTATE

$1,849,000 - BACKYARD PARADISE
123 WILLIAM ST, NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE

$1,350,000
SOLD OVER ASKING IN 17 DAYS!
645 SIMCOE ST, NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE
LOCAL DOCTORS ARE THRILLED TO HAVE PURCHASED THIS HOME!

$929,000
HAPPY BUYERS!
2589 GROUSE LANE, NIAGARA FALLS

$1,549,000
$1,599,000 - STEPS TO THE LAKE
41 RICARDO ST, NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE
153 REGENCY ST, NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE

270 FT - PRIME WATERFRONT 5.5 ACRES - $3,998,000
515 SANDY BAY RD, HALDIMAND COUNTY
STUNNING SIDESPLIT - INGROUND POOL - $745,000

SOLD IN LESS THAN 1 MONTH!
66 LINWELL ROAD, ST. CATHARINES

McGILLIVRAY™
Trusted
Angelika Zammit is proud to have been recognized as the exclusive McGillivray Trusted Agent in the Niagara-on-the-Lake market.

T. 905.468.8777  C. 289.214.4394
www.angelikazammit.com
496 Mississauga Street
Local Office: Niagara-on-the-Lake

#1 BROKERAGE in the GTA.
The largest independent real estate brokerage in Canada - 6,000 Agents across 10 branches in Ontario.

HGTV Celebrity, Scott McGillivray